

If you have the courage, I will show you the future of money

G. Edward Griffin, Conference Chairman

Attend in person or watch live stream.
Broadcast live from La Bellasera Hotel,
Paso Robles, California, December 8 & 9

The High Priests of Money, in their temples called Central Banks, long ago anticipated that their arcane secrets eventually would be revealed, and they would have to invent a new deity to replace it. That deity has been invented and is called Distributed Ledger Technology. Its beta model is called Blockchain, and its first use for money is called Bitcoin. New models are being tested, and rapidly deployed. The end of this process is a cashless society, which will place humanity under micro control by the same High Priests who now control fiat money. It is being offered to the faithful as a mysterious and benevolent new god.

That's not to say that cryptocurrencies are evil, because they do, indeed, contain the potential for great benefit, but this digital coin has a back side. Cryptos are like guns. They can be used for good or evil depending on who is using them.

Cryptos are here to stay, and you will be using them even if you don't want to. Why? Because the High Priests are building the mechanism to facilitate that, and their friends in government are drafting laws to force you to use it.

Your future is being planned in ways you cannot imagine. If you are like most, you probably have no knowledge of this and no reliable source to acquire that knowledge – which brings us to the purpose of this conference.

Speakers will address the speculative nature of the crypto market, including how they think insane profits still can be made, but the main thrust of this event is far beyond profit vs. loss. It's about what our future will hold if the trend is not reversed – and how to have a monetary system that is better than either fiat or crypto.
